

Greythorn confirms its continued accreditation of ISO 9001:2000

22 May 2006

Greythorn's UK office announced yesterday they have completed the ISO audit and proud to receive continued accreditation of ISO 9001:2000.

A report from ISO auditors confirm the effectiveness of Greythorn's quality management system and the company's ability to demonstrate continuous improvement at all levels of the business.

This certification is important because it proves Greythorn's operations are viable and can support the quality of service delivered in the best interest of our customers.

As such, Greythorn meets and maintains minimum management standards including continuous quality improvement. Greythorn's management structure is designed to ensure that services are of the highest quality and to instil consistency of performance.

Over the years, Greythorn has developed a comprehensive quality management system and sustainable sales delivery methodology which is a major factor in the company obtaining its accreditation.

Effective, quality and reliable processes and procedures are key elements for success and are an integral part of all the functional activities of Greythorn. From planning through to timely sales delivery, Greythorn's processes are guided to ensure the delivery of a continually improving quality service, which meets its Quality Objectives.

Greythorn's quality system has been implemented internationally with offices holding ISO certification.